KATY BRIDGE ACROSS CANADIAN DAMAGED

The Katy bridge across the Canadian river was damaged this morning to an extent that makes it necessary for trains to be detoured via Shawnee and Holdenville to Ada.

Full particulars were not obtainable, but it is reported that some eight or ten bents of the trestle on the south end of the bridge went out. The recent high water washed a large quantity of drift against the piling and it is supposed that the weight of this was sufficient to do the damage above mentioned. The break is supposed to have occurred about 9 o'clock, as the north bound passenger made it through this morning without mishap.

CURRENCY BILL READY

DESIGNED TO GIVE NATION BET-TER SYSTEM OF BANK-ING.

Washington, June 19.—The Administration currency bill was made public tonight by Representative Glass, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency. It will be introduced in the House and Senate after President Wilson has delivered in person his address to Congress on Monday.

An outline of the measure prepared by Mr. Glass describes the measure as a basis for legislative action.

If you Value Your Eyesight, see preparing myself to

of the eye. My modern equipment, backed by this long experience is your Guarantee of Satisfaction.
A. D. COON, Ramsey's Drug Store, Ada, Okla states that it will be gone over in detail for alterations, and sets out that its purpose is to accomplish three principal objects:

Provision of a means for rediscounting commercial paper of specified types.

A basis for elastic notes properly safeguarded.

Machinery for doing foreign banking business.

as they have been outlined from time to time since the president began a study of the subject with House and Senate leaders, Secretary McAdoo and other advisers, providing twelve or more federal reserve banks which will rediscount paper, deal in government securities, exchange and conduct government fiscal operations. National banks and such state banks and trust companies as conform to standards would be stockholders of the reserve banks. The government would hold no stock.

The government would control the federal reserve banks entirely through a federal reserve board of seven members, in which the banks would have no representation. The board would be composed of the Secretary of the treasury, secretary of agriculture, the controller of the Currency as members ex officio; four other members would be chosen by the president and confirmed by the senate. The National bank note circulation would remain undisturbed and no proposal is made in the bill for retiring approximately $700,000,000 2 per cent bonds upon which that note issue now rests.
An amendment or separate bill to refund those bonds into 3 per cent bonds may be introduced later.

In addition to the $700,000,000 existing National bank notes, not more than $500,000,000 in what are known as federal reserve treasury notes might be issued at the discretion of the federal reserve board solely for the purpose of making advances to the federal reserve banks, which would do no business with the public, deal only with their member banks and receive deposits only from the United States. While the notes would, on their faces, purport to be the obligations of the United States, they would be required to be secured by a gold reserve of 33 1-3 per cent provided by the federal reserve bank, would be a first and paramount lien on all the assets of these banks and would be redeemable in gold on demand at the Treasury Department.

Missouri has passed a law pensioning Confederate veterans. The first appropriation is only $30,000 but hereafter it is probable that the legislature will be more liberal.

Sometime ago the Commercial Club had up the matter of insurance rates and appointed a committee to look into the matter and also consider a plan for a more adequate fire fighting apparatus. It might help matters along considerably if this committee would have a fully report ready for the next meeting of the club.

It has come at last—Carmen, the great three-reel Thanhouser picture. The DeSota will present it this evening and every indication points to a splendid success. Marguerite Snow plays the title role, and her performance is exceptionally good at all times, and in this absorbing drama, which embraces scenes in Gypsy camp, cigar factory, bull fight and the like, she is at her best.

"Tricks of the Trade" is the subject of a lively drama in which an observant servant girl runs down a pair of crooks. They get all that is coming to them. ANOTHER TRAGEDY OF UNLOADED GUN

Stratford, Okla., June 20.—Thursday morning about 8 o'clock Caulie Rush, aged 16 years, was accidentally killed with a pistol. He and Huile Schott, a lad also 16, were at the farm of P. Pendergrass about two miles from town. Each had a pistol, supposed to be empty, and engaged in a pistol fired, the ball entering the head of young Rush, killing him instantly. The affair is deeply regretted by all and friends and relatives of the lads have the sympathy of the entire community.

Alamo Monument Highest in World.

The highest memorial monument in the world is to be erected at San Antonio, Texas, in honor of the soldiers who defended the Alamo in that city against the Mexicans during the war for the independence of Texas. The tower will be 802 ft. high, and will be the highest structure of any kind in the world with the exception of the Eiffel tower in Paris. This structure will be a great deal more than a memorial monument, since it will contain four auditoriums, a museum, art gallery, statuary hall and an individual exhibition room for each county in the state. The cost is estimated at $2,000,000. The base of the structure will be of solid granite and 50 ft. high. Surmounting the ledge at the top of this base will be statues, of heroic size, of Travis, Crockett, Bowie and Bonham, the four leaders of the Texans who were killed while defending the Alamo. A picture of the monument appears in the July Popular Mechanics Magazine.

STUDENTS PLACED IN BONEHEAD CLASS

Spokane, Wash., June 20.—By segregating backward students and placing them in a special "bonehead" room the faculty of the Lewis and Clark high school in Spokane brought about a 50 per cent improvement in the school work of the backward ones. Principal Henry M. Hart and Instructor L. L. Little discovered at the opening of the semester just ended that 31 boys in the school had passed in a total of 60 subjects and had failed in a total of 76 subjects. These boys and one additional were placed in the "bonehead" room, a designation known only to the principal and Mr. Little, and efforts were made to ascertain the causes of failure of each boy. In many cases the boys said they could not get along with certain teachers, so changes were made. Daily reports were received from the teachers as to the progress of each boy. After nine weeks an examination was given and the 32 boys passed in 87 subjects and failed in 59. Twelve passed with such credit that they were returned to their classes. The twenty remaining passed in the next examination in 68 subjects and failed in only 27. Figures for the entire semester of four and a half months show that the boys passed in a total of 384 subjects and failed in only 298, the percentage of improvement being 50 in one semester.

The Science of Detection.

There had been a bold, brazen robbery in the jam closet. Evidence of haste was plain, splashes of jam being everywhere. When the owner of the jam made the discovery that she had been robbed, she spent no time or effort in futile speculation. She took prompt and practical steps. She searched in the spilled jam for finger prints and found them.

"Hah!" she chuckled in the best Sherlock Holmes manner. "I shall have the thief in five minutes." She went to her bedroom and took from a bureau drawer four squares of paper. They were labeled respectively: Willie's thumbprint; Helen's thumbprint; Tommy's thumbprint; and a fourth—a very little one—Baby's thumbprint. Quietly she took them to the jam closet and made comparisons.

"It is as I suspected," she said, as she got down: "it was Tommy." That night Tommy got his—July Woman's Home Companion.

WEBB LAW LEAVES PENALTY TO STATES

Washington, June 20.—The Webb law forbidding interstate shipments of liquor into "dry" states is not a criminal statute and violations of it cannot be prosecuted in United States courts. Attorney General McReynolds so declared in instructions sent today to every U. S. attorney in the country.

"The law merely prohibits such interstate traffic and contains no penalty for infractions."

The law simply deprives shippers of any privileges they might claim on the ground of interstate commerce and permits the application of state prohibition laws to interstate commerce in liquor.

BAD CHECK LAW NOW IN EFFECT

Better keep close watch on your bank account for these are evil days for the fellow who grows careless when that carelessness can be construed by the court to be a desire to cheat or swindle. What is known as the bad check law is operative tomorrow, which is the 19th day of June. The State Retailers' Association, through its secretary, R. J. Meek, assisted by W. O. Atwell of the Ardmore Retailers, and other secretaries is to be given credit for the passage of the bill. When the retailers began working on the passage of the measure they found that as many as twenty-three members of the legislature had checks then outstanding which they had given and which bore the "no funds" endorsement of the banker.

This law provides that: "Every person who with intent to cheat and defraud shall obtain or attempt to obtain from any other person, any money, property or other valuable thing by means or by use of any trick or deception or false or fraudulent representation or statement or pretense or by any other means or instrument or device commonly called the confidence game or by use of any false or bogus check or any other written or printed or engraved instrument or spurious coin or metal shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding seven years.

PONTOTOC COUNTY VALUES WILL SHOW INCREASE

Tax Assessor N. T. Heard informs the News that when the final touches are put on the tax rolls of Pontotoc county it is probable that a substantial increase will be shown over 1912. The commissioners raised the renditions on only about fifty and the final hearing on these cases will be held Monday.

ANOTHER FOOL GIVES UP HIS LIFE

Ascot, Eng., June 19.—A male suffragist today flung himself in front of August Belmont's four-year-old, Tracery, during the race for the Ascot gold cup. The man was fatally injured. Tracery fell in a heap in the center of the course, but his jockey, A. Whalley, fell clear of him. Neither horse nor jockey was seriously hurt.

The man sprang over the rails with a suffrage flag in one hand and a revolver in the other while the eight runners in the famous race were turning into the straight for the home stretch, with Tracery in the lead. He made a grab at Tracery's bridle, brought horse and rider down and himself fell in a heap with his skull fractured by a horse's hoof.

The unconscious man, who was not identified, was removed to the Ascot hospital. A surgeon announced that his condition was hopeless. It had

THREE CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH NEAR HOBART

Hobart, Ok., June 19.—While the father and mother were working in the cotton field, three children of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Martin, who live nineteen miles northwest of Hobart, were burned to death. The house caught fire in some unknown manner, and all contents were destroyed. The ages of the children were 5 and 3 years and the youngest four months old.

The oldest boy was found near the door, the four-months-old sister in his arms, where she was evidently caught in attempting to escape from the flames.

Two features of this picture are very delightful, and will meet general approval, the exquisite photography and fine acting of Marguerite Snow in the title role. All other members of the cast are good. The exteriors were chosen with excellent taste, the costumes are elaborate and costly, and one of the interior scenes—that associated with the toreador's first appearance—is indeed a gem. The Thanhouser directors went to great pains to make this picture one of beauty. All the scenes are given, including the Gypsy camp, smuggling, retreat, cigar factory, bull fight, etc., and on the whole, the production is a very creditable one.

A Boy Today A Man Tomorrow

THIS boy has all the earmarks of good rearing. He has been brought up by a good mother. If he follows her guidance he'll not do anything very bad. He will not wreck any banks or commit any crimes. He'll be a good citizen.

But the question is, who, besides his mother, will influence this lad in the next ten years or so?

What sort of an impression of the world is he going to get, now that he is stepping out into it?

It all depends on what is thrown in his way.

There are good influences that he needs.

Think of what it would mean if a boy could spend a few days of each year at this period of his life at a Chautauqua.

He would be thrown under the influence of many of the great men of the world in a dozen fields of activity.

He would hear inspiring lectures by world-famed orators, he would learn the truth about entertainment, that the best of it suggests nothing but the clean. And he would hear music that would stir his soul for a love of the beautiful all his life.

Thousands of men owe much to the inspiration of the Chautauqua.

How much more it would have been worth had they known something of its influence as boys.

Fall Irish Potatoes.

In harvesting the last of the spring crop of Irish potatoes it has doubtless been noticed that more rotten tubers were found near the surface of the soil than deeper down. This is merely an indication of the requirements of Irish potatoes. They require cool, moist conditions, which are present to a greater degree deeper in the soil at that season of the year.

A moist, well drained, clay loam soil is best for fall potatoes. Such a soil which has been planted for some early cultivated crop and kept cultivated even after the crop has been removed should give good results in fall potatoes. Do not take a weed patch at about planting time and expect to prepare and plant a crop of potatoes and reap a good harvest.

The tubers should be planted from the middle of June to the last of July. Some use cold storage potatoes for seed; that is, tubers kept dormant from the previous year, while many use tubers from the first crop. In case of using tubers from the first crop, especially where planting is delayed some time after harvesting, they should be sprinkled with slaked lime and spread out in some cool place, as this will give them a natural rest, and, again, they are not so likely to rot.

Lookout Mountain is the standard southern second crop and keeps well from the fall crop until time to plant the next fall crop. Seed of this variety should be obtained if possible. They are usually advertised in agricultural papers. The size of the tuber is not materially different from that of the spring crop, usually larger if any different. They should be planted thicker on account of the difficulty of getting a stand.

Potatoes should be planted six inches deep and kept cultivated from the time they are planted, just the same as though they were up, in order to conserve the moisture. This may be done by means of cultivators or harrows. After the potatoes have come up their cultivation and care is not different from that of the spring crop.—D. C. Mooring, Department of Horticulture and Botany, Oklahoma A. and M. College, Stillwater.

NEW LAW IN EFFECT FOR REGISTRAR DEEDS

The new chattel mortgage law passed by the legislature is now in force. It requires the register of deeds to cancel all chattel mortgages placed on record free of charge when written receipts are presented showing that all the payments have been made.

Within ten days after the chattel has been paid the mortgagees must give a written receipt for the cancellation or be subject to a fine of $50. It is further provided that the register of deeds must keep on file for public information all chattels until cancelled.

The object of the new law is to effect at all times a clear title on all chattel property. In the past a fee of 10 cents has been made for all releases or assignments of mortgages. Under this system the party to whom the release was given often failed to file with the register. In this way an examination of the records would not determine whether a mortgage had been paid or not. The new law will cause much more work in the register's office.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Gloria Kerr, a motherless girl who has spent most of her life at school, arrives at her father's home in Belmont. David Kerr is the political boss of the town and is anxious to prevent his daughter learning of his real character.

CHAPTER II—Kendall, representing the Chicago packers, is negotiating with Judge Gilbert, Kerr's chief adviser, for a valuable franchise. They fear the opposition of Joe Wright, editor of the reform paper.

CHAPTER III—Kerr asks the assistance of Judge Gilbert in introducing Gloria to Belmont society and promises to help him put through the packers' franchise and let him have all the graft.

CHAPTER IV—Gloria meets Joe Wright at the Gilberts. It appears they are on intimate terms, having met previously in a touring party in Europe.

CHAPTER V—Gloria twits Wright on his failure to keep an engagement to meet her in Paris. He explains that the death of his mother prevented his going to Paris.

CHAPTER VI—The Gilberts invite Gloria to stay with them pending the refurbishing of the Kerr home.

CHAPTER VIII—Wright begins his fight against the proposed franchise in the columns of his paper, the Belmont News.

CHAPTER IX—Kerr, through his henchmen, exerts every influence to hamper Wright in the publication of his paper.

CHAPTER X—Gloria realizes she is not being received by the best society and is unhappy. She takes up settlement work.

CHAPTER XI—Kerr and his henchmen decide to buy Kerr's paper and ask the editor to meet them at Gilbert's office.

CHAPTER XII—Wright in his desire to keep from Gloria knowledge of her father's position, avoids her during the fight. Gloria is piqued.

CHAPTER XIII—Calling at Gilbert's office to solicit a donation Gloria meets Wright. He proposes and is accepted while waiting to be called into the conference.

CHAPTER XIV—Wright refuses to sell his paper and declares he will fight to a finish.

CHAPTER XV—The Belmont News appears with a bitter attack on Kerr. Gloria calls Wright a coward and refuses to listen to any explanation from him.

had been won. How much she would have been spared, she pondered, had she not been so eager for his love as to show him so soon that she cared for him.

Every familiar gesture which was at all a part of him she knew would call him to mind when another man might make it. The way he held his cigar when he smoked, the odd manner in which he would lock his hands together whenever a knotty problem bothered him, these little things and a host of others would come back to plague her.

All the dear, dead past crowded into her mind. It was not of the man whom that afternoon she had spurned that she thought, but of the man whom in her heart she cherished—her ideal.

With a mighty sob she began again to weep. There had come to her the realization that love was done. Far across the room the moonbeams crept before Gloria fell into a fitful slumber.

CHAPTER XVII.

"I've forgotten what we'd planned for this afternoon," Gloria remarked to Mrs. Hayes the morning after the stormy scene in Judge Gilbert's office. Yesterday was carefully ignored by both as they talked.

"This was the day Mrs. Wallace asked us to help her at the mission," Mrs. Hayes explained.

She did not say further that she had telephoned earlier in the morning and had Mrs. Wallace, the matron, make plans whereby the whole afternoon would be taken up. She believed Gloria's peace of mind would be all the greater were she engaged in some work which would make her feel that through her the pain of the sufferer was alleviated and the bruised heart of the unhappy bound up.

It was just two o'clock when they reached the mission. They had not been there long before Mrs. Wallace suggested that they call on a poor girl who was ill in a room over Mike Noonan's saloon. The sick woman was known to her, but she told nothing of her story. It wasn't much different from any one of half a hundred she might have told.

Two Windows Looking Out Over the Roofs of Neighboring Houses.

The two women felt not the slightest fear in walking through such a tough quarter of the town. Mrs. Hayes was an experienced settlement worker, and knew many of the persons whom they passed. They for their part knew her and respected her for the kindly charity she dispensed so unostentatiously. As for Gloria, she could fear nothing since she was almost in total ignorance of what dangers might beset their path. Then, too, she was busy with her own thoughts.

Mrs. Hayes had been told in what room the sick woman lay, and without a word to anyone, in fact they saw no one, they went in the door on the side street and climbed the dark, uncarpeted stairs to the third floor. At a door just at the foot of the flight of steps which led to the fourth story, Mrs. Hayes knocked gently. There was no answer. She decided that if there was no response to the next knock she would open the door to see if the girl were asleep. A second and louder knock, however, aroused her and she called to them to enter.

Gloria and Mrs. Hayes walked into the room, and as the latter went to the bedside to explain how they happened to call, the daughter of David Kerr stood stock still and gazed about her with undisguised curiosity. The occupant of the room, a frail little creature with uncertain, golden hair, was known to her companions as Little Ella. Upon the blotter at the police station she was always booked as Luella Windermere. She had found the name in a novel and, liking it, had taken it for her own. In the unkindly daylight, without the paint that mocked the cheek that once had bloomed a healthier hue, the pallor of her face was heightened by the dark circles under her eyes. Yet the ravages of a life too harsh for one so weak had not been so great as to blot entirely from her face the traces of a smirking sweetness.

If Little Ella's room could be summed up in one word, that word would be—sham. It was not a poverty that honestly confessed itself to be such, that room. Instead it was a poverty that slunk away into corners and hid behind the rankest imitations of better things. Everything seemed to have been purchased at the cheapest booths at Vanity Fair. There were few things of substance, but many things of vain and empty show. Had Gloria been more skilled in reading the world aright, every bauble, every useless ornament would have preached a sermon. As it was, there was for her in large part only the interest of novelty.

To the right of Gloria were two windows looking out over the roofs of neighboring houses. Between them was a scarred maple dresser. It was littered among other things with postcard photographs, business cards, a calendar with a picture in many colors and a bottle of Florida water. Directly in front of her was the sick girl's bed, a cheap iron affair with massive tarnished brass trimmings. Beyond it was a frail-looking trunk painted in imitation of leather. The only things which boldly confessed themselves to be just as represented were two wooden kitchen chairs.

Looking close beside her, Gloria saw a battered maple washstand and beyond it a door which led into a closet under the stairs. She glanced curiously at the walls, which boasted some cheap prints, most of them showing by the advertising matter upon them from which whisky house they had emanated. Some of the girl's waists and skirts hung upon nails, but the clothes which she had taken off the night before on retiring were upon a chair beside her trunk.

"I heard you were sick," Mrs. Hayes said sympathetically, "and I want to know if I can do anything to help you."

Little Ella viewed them with cold antagonism. They were not of her world and she both feared and hated them.

"Now," she growled. Then against her real wishes something out of her old life made her add grudgingly, "Much obliged."

Mrs. Hayes had worked too long among such people not to understand, and she ignored the girl's unfriendly manner by asking: "How do you feel today?"

"Rotten."

"No wonder; it's so close in here. I think it would be better for you if you'd let me open a window. It's mild out. May I?"

"Go as far as yuh like; I don't feel like fightin'."

A note from Mrs. Hayes said Gloria to open a window.

"There now," exclaimed the younger visitor. "You'll feel better."

"Gloria," Mrs. Hayes asked, so the sick woman could not hear, "do you mind staying with her while I go to the mission for a few minutes? I want Mrs. Wallace to come over if she can; and the doctor, too, as soon as I can find him."

"Certainly, I'll stay," was the prompt response. "What's the matter with her?"

"I can't say until I see the doctor, because I'm not sure. I want Doctor Hayes to see her. If I can't get him I'll get Doctor Norton. You're not afraid to stay?"

Gloria smiled. What was there to fear? The girl surely could not become so ill in the short space of time Mrs. Hayes should be away as to render her inexperienced nurse absolutely helpless.

"Of course I'm not afraid," she replied. Then impulsively, "Besides, I want to do some good in the world. I've been too selfish."

"No, dear, not that," her companion gently remonstrated. "Thoughtless, perhaps, because you didn't know, but not selfish." Then she turned to Little Ella and said in the same quiet tone: "I think you'd be happier where there'd be some one to take care of you."

"I'm not sick, I'm just tired." The ignorant fear sickness and disguise it as long as they can, shirking the fight and thereby making it all the harder. Understanding this, Mrs. Hayes answered lightly:

"If that's the case, I hope you'll entertain my friend for me until I return. She's interested in the work at the mission."

"You're on," Little Ella replied with an air of resignation as Mrs. Hayes left the room. She rolled over on her side and closed her eyes. Already she began to feel bored.

Although Gloria had professed that she had no fear about being left with the sick woman, when she said it she had in mind only a fear of being alone in such a dismal lodging house and fear that she might be called upon to act as doctor and trained nurse both were her patient to take a turn for the worse. Now, however, a new thought came to her. How was she to act? What was she to do to amuse her? She felt instinctively the antipathy she had aroused. She cowered like a lamb before this young she-wolf of the city. She was alone, defenseless, with this creature that had so far reverted to type that she might rend and tear. Even in a battle of wits, and that was all there would be if the girl did not ignore her entirely, Gloria felt herself no match for this brazen child of misfortune. Her comparisons were physical, but it was not a physical fear she felt. Sheltered inexperience was pitted against the most cruel experience society could ever devise or tolerate.

Gloria was mistaken in thinking that Little Ella slept. After Mrs. Hayes had left her she walked quietly back to a chair by the bedside. On it lay a cheap novel with which the sick woman had been beguiling the time. She picked it up and was turning the pages casually when a feeling stole over her that she was being observed. Putting aside the book, she found Little Ella gazing at her stonily.

"Say, what'd you come here for?"

"Why," she answered in surprise, "I wanted to help you."

A sneer curled the sick woman's lip, a cynical sneer of disbelief.

"Help me! To what? I ain't ever saw you down here before. Come on, what brought you?"

"I came with Mrs. Hayes," was all that Gloria could find to answer.

"The woman what just went out?"

"Yes."

Greatest of Horse Shows Opens.

London, June 19.—Under royal patronage, and with a list of prizes and an array of entries never equaled at any previous exhibition of its kind given in London, the seventh International Horse Show was opened at the Olympia this afternoon and will be continued until July 1. The decorations of the big exhibition hall were so tasteful and gorgeous as to evoke exclamations of surprise and admiration from all the visitors. The main feature consisted of thousands and thousands of red roses clustering on gilded trellis work. The cost of the decorations exceeded $50,000.

The show this year is of a more truly international character than ever before. No fewer than fifteen countries are represented. Both the United States and Canada are well represented. Judge Moore, always the strongest American competitor, has a greater string than usual. Other American exhibitors include E. T. Stotesbury, Edward B. McLean, Alfred G. Vanderbilt and J. Summer Draper. The most prominent of the Canadian competitors are the Siftons and the Hon. Adam Beck. Miss Mona Dunn, the twelve-year-old Canadian girl, who has attracted attention at previous exhibitions, is on hand as usual.

The most coveted trophy of the show is the King Edward VII. Cup for jumping, open to international officers in teams of three. The French have won it twice, and if they succeed this year it will be their absolute property.

Mrs. Claud Price and Idus Harris were called to Madill Thursday afternoon by the serious illness of little Juanita, daughter of Cleve Harris. The little one was not expected to live through the night but today a message stated that she was still alive and was thought to be slightly better.
